Walk with me, let's change your world!

Give to others - this will enrich your life.

If I talked to you only about increasing your wealth (your amassing of "stuff"), I would surely be doing you a disservice. Not only should we try to increase your wealth, but, more importantly, we should try to increase your "Riches."

"Riches" are described as the amassing of things that enrich your life, not just increase your wealth. I heard a description one time that, while you can buy "Fun," you can't buy "Happiness." I agree with that statement, and will describe it this way.

Water skiing is fun. Snow skiing is fun. Taking in a show, going out to dinner, maybe going dancing in a club is all fun. Having your 17 year old boy look you in the eye, give you a hug, and say, "Dad, I love you." ----- Man, THAT'S GOOD! It is cute when he is 4, but magical when he is 17. That is happiness. That is riches. You can't buy THAT one. And THAT one is the only one that matters.

In the end, the impact we make on other people's lives is what matters, and, ultimately, what will create happiness. So, we need to think of things that will impact others, that will help others, that will, in turn, add to our richness. Giving to others is only one such way, but, since I write and talk on finances, I will cover it here.

Giving to others enhances their lives, and it enriches our lives. I speak on this topic a lot in my "Legacy and Giving" lesson, the last lesson in "Your Financial Empowerment." I truly believe that giving should be a great part of your life, and a great part of your financial life.

In fact, it is on the top of our budget template as "Charity." That is not a mistake, and should be a part of your financial life, because if you can put charity into your spirit, it will increase the richness in your life.

So, give to others, the person you may really be helping could be you.

Sincerely,

Mike O'Neal
